From the Editors

It's like the movie 'School of Rock' is coming to town. The roving Power Chord Academy is an inspirational workshop for musicians between the ages of 12 and 18. A summer boot camp for aspiring musicians, these two week-long Chicago sessions saturate young artists with musical know-how. Participants learn about everything from forming a band to working production to making a music video. One highlight of each program includes a special mystery guest (a professional touring band or artist) to perform for the students and answer questions each week. Students vote on who they would like to perform. The 2005 artist list includes The Donnas, Rise Against and Chad Gilbert from New Found Glory, plus guests from Atlantic Records, Epitaph Records and more. The admission price includes a shared dormitory room, food and all the daily activities. Beginners to advanced are encouraged to attend, as well as any type of instrumentation, and the camp leads up to a final performance. Log on to the Power Chord Academy web site for more details about the two Chicago sessions. -- Andrea Rizzo
